You may have recognized that all the points where the function equals 0 somehow involve π, but this is not a description of those points. The cosine function equals 1 at all of the even multiples of π, and it equals -1 at all of the odd multiples of π. The correct answer is: all odd multiples of $\dfrac{\pi}{2}$