

If you shift the graph of $y = \cos \theta$ by $\frac{\pi}{2}$ units to the left, the hill that had the y -axis running through the center will now be positioned on the interval $[-\pi, 0]$. But the graph of $y = \sin \theta$ has a valley on that interval, so they are not the same graph.