

You may have thought that the effect of adding a constant to the input was to shift the graph of the original function to the right, but actually it will shift to the left. So the graph of $y = \sin\left(\theta + \frac{\pi}{2}\right)$ will be the same as the graph of cosine, which is not the graph shown.