

You are correct that this is a sine function. However, recall that the graph of $y = \sin x$ has a valley to the left of the y -axis. Because the graph has a hill there, a reflection has taken place. This implies something about the value of a .