

You are correct that $a < 0$. Because there is a hill to the left of the y -axis, a reflection has taken place. Remember, however, that the graph of a sine function would have a hill or valley on each side of the y -axis, while a cosine function would have a hill or valley with the y -axis running through the middle of it.