

Perfect squares can be even or odd. For example, 49 and 64 are both perfect squares. The correct answer is: No, because there is no whole number that when multiplied by itself gives 50.