

Because point Q is to the right of point P on the number line, the value at point Q is greater than the value at point P.