

Correct. The number 23 belongs to all three sets, while the number 0 belongs to the whole and rational number sets (it is not a natural, or counting, number). 0.2 is a rational number because it can be expressed as a ratio of integers; it is not a whole or natural number.