Correct. Since the top-left square already contains 2, either 1, 3 or 4 must go in the circle. Look at the location of the circle: its column already contains a 3, and its row already contains a 1. This leaves 4 as the only remaining option.