Correct. Identifying patterns requires inductive reasoning, which generalizes based on observations. Deductive reasoning uses a logical argument to prove why a conjecture is always true.