

Incorrect. Think of creating an arrangement by randomly choosing one letter at a time from P, A, S, T, E, and L. Order matters since we are interested in the number of arrangements of the letters. The first letter can be any of the 6 letters. How many choices will there be for the second letter? The third? Use the Fundamental Counting Principle to complete the calculation.