

When two objects have the same proportions, you must set up a ratio, such as length to width, for each, and then set up a proportion that states that the two ratios are equal. You do not subtract the same number from each side of one object to get the sides of the other. The correct answer is 6 inches.