

The commutative property of multiplication allows you to change the order of 24 and x . You cannot split the digits of a number, such as 24, apart and switch one of them with the other number. The correct answer is $x \cdot 24$.