

Incorrect. The prefixes mono, bi, and tri tell you how many terms a polynomial has. Also, in order for an expression to be a polynomial, each term must be either a constant or a number (coefficient) times a variable raised to a whole number power. If there is no coefficient, it is understood to be 1.