It appears as if you ignored the negative exponent on the variable x. When you divide a variable raised to a power by the same variable raised to a power, you subtract the exponents. If you get a negative exponent as a result, the variable with the negative exponent can be rewritten with a positive exponent in the denominator.