Correct. Multiply the absolute values of the factors. A negative number multiplied by a negative number is positive, and a negative number multiplied by a positive number is negative.