

The absolute value of a number is its distance from 0 on the number line. Distance cannot be negative, so this equation has no solution.