

Incorrect. Use the distributive property to simplify. Isolate the variable, if possible. If the simplified equation simply states that a constant is equal to itself, then the solution is all real numbers. If the simplified equation simply states that a constant is equal to a different constant, then there is no solution.