

You may have thought that you just had to drop the power of 10 after the decimal. However, you need to move the decimal point six places to the left to create a decimal equivalent to the number in scientific notation.