When dividing the variables and subtracting the exponents, you may have subtracted incorrectly or been confused about where the variable factor should end up. If you divide and get a negative exponent, rewrite that factor in the denominator with a positive exponent.