This point represents the ordered pair $(2, -3)$. You began at the origin and moved two units in the positive direction (right) along the x-axis, but then you moved three units down (in the negative direction). You should have moved three units up (in the positive direction).