

If you end up with an equation that is always true, such as  $x = x$ , then there are an infinite number of solutions. However, for the system in this question, both equations being true would imply that  $0 = 1$ . But this is false, which means that you cannot find numbers that make both equations true.