

You may have incorrectly graphed the equations and obtained two parallel lines, which would mean there is no solution. If that were the case, the system would be inconsistent. However, this system does have a solution. The correct answer is: The system is consistent because it has a solution.