Correct. A system is inconsistent if it has no solution. This will occur if and only if the graphs of the equations are parallel lines. Lines are parallel when they have the same slope. The slope of the first line is 2. So the missing number must be 2.