

This would be a good strategy if you had the same variable term in the two equations. It would give you opposite terms in the two equations that would cancel out if you added the equations together. But you already have opposite terms in the two equations.