

Incorrect. Add two equations to eliminate a variable, then add two other equations to eliminate the same variable. Now you have two new equations with two variables. Solve that new system using methods you learned previously.

Substitute the two values you find into one of the original equations to get the value of the third variable. Check your answer in all three equations.