

You may have thought that a system of equations should have one solution. However, when attempting to eliminate variables, you should get the statement  $0 = 0$ . When the system leads to an equation with no variables, there will either be no solution or an infinite number of solutions.