The sine function is equal to zero at these two values of θ, but they are not the only values on this interval for which the function equals 0. Remember that the graph of sine has a hill/ valley pattern that repeats forever in both directions. Because of this, values of the function will repeat with regularity.