If this were an inverse variation, there would be only two variables, and as one increased, the other would decrease.

If this were an inverse variation, there would be only two variables, and as one increased, the other would decrease.