

You may have correctly isolated the variable, squared both sides, and solved the resulting quadratic equation, but $x = 1$ is an extraneous solution. If you substitute it into the original equation, it will produce a false statement. Check this and the other solution in the original equation.