

The number of chairs in a room will depend on different factors. Two rooms with the same length can have a different number of chairs in them. So a single input of room length will produce different outputs of number of chairs. Therefore, the number of chairs in a room is not a function of the length of a room.