You could organize the ordered pairs in a table to help you see that each input in this set of ordered pairs has only one output. The relation is a function.