

In a linear function, any real number can be substituted for  $x$  and yield a real number output. For any real number, you can always find an  $x$  value that gives you that number for the output. Therefore, the domain and the range of a linear function are all real numbers.