You may have recognized that the general shape of the graph matches the graph of a logarithm. To see that it is not an exact match, you need to use a calculator. For example, $f(10) = \log 2.5 \approx 0.4$. However, for the given graph, when $x = 10$, y is very close to 1.