

You may have chosen this answer because you are not familiar with the graphs of exponential functions, or you misread the answer. The graph of  $f(x) = e \cdot 4x$  would be linear, because the variable  $x$  is being multiplied by two constants,  $e$  and  $4$ . The given graph is not a straight line.