

Although the colors of the bars in the graphs are different, this is not relevant to the data being presented. The correct answer is that the graphs do not use the same scale, making it appear that Western University gets a much greater number of applicants than Eastern University.