

A circle graph usually shows percentages and not the actual numbers. The purpose of a circle graph is to compare the relative size of the categories. The size of the sections alone is often enough to show this. So the actual numbers are not needed. The actual numbers would be important for something like a bar graph.