

Incorrect. The probability of an event is a number between and including 0 and 1. For example, an impossible event has a probability of 0. The greater the number, the more likely an event is to happen.