

You may have correctly found the number of outcomes for the event to be 5 but incorrectly divided by the number of other possible outcomes (10). To calculate the probability of this event, you must divide the number of outcomes for the event (choosing a pretzel) by the total number of outcomes in the sample space (choosing anything in the bag).