

You may have noticed that San Francisco had the highest number of cloudy days for any one month in the first six months of 2011. However, you must list the data for each city in order from least to greatest. Then calculate the mean of the middle two data points to find the median of each set.