

Incorrect. The probability of an event is a number between and including 0 and 1. For example, an event that is certain has a probability of 1. The smaller the number, the less likely an event is to happen.