

You may have thought that you were choosing one option (long) out of seven options (silk, cotton, beading, fringe, short, medium, long). Neither of these is the correct way to find the size of the event space or sample space. Use the Fundamental Counting Principle or a tree diagram to find the number of possible long scarf combinations, and divide this by the total number of possible scarf combinations.