Correct. The Fundamental Counting Principle states that you can multiply the number of possible outcomes for each event to find the total number of possible outcomes for the combined events. Choosing the bread has three outcomes; choosing the meat has five outcomes. The total number of outcomes or combinations is $3 \cdot 5 = 15$.