

You may have chosen the size of the event space instead of the probability. Probability is the ratio of the size of the event space to the size of the sample space. To find the latter, use the Fundamental Counting Principle to find the size of the sample space, or write out every possible outcome. The correct answer is  $\frac{1}{6}$ .