

A circle graph usually shows percentages, and not the actual numbers. The purpose of a circle graph is to compare the relative sizes of the categories. The sizes of the sections alone are often enough to show this. So the actual numbers are not needed. The actual numbers would be important for a representation such as a bar graph.