

The polygon could be divided in a way that included these two pieces, but there would also be a third rectangle. Then you would need to find the areas of all three pieces and add them together. The area of the polygon could be found more simply using just two pieces.