

The perimeter consists of the six semicircles. The length of two semicircles equals the circumference of one whole circle. So six semicircles give you three circles. Therefore, the perimeter equals three times the circumference of one circle. The diameter of the circle equals 6 mm, as seen in the diagram.