You correctly identified that you should use the diameter of 6 mm to find the circumference of one circle. However, if you divide the circumference in half, you will find the circumference of only one semicircle. The perimeter of the flower consists of six semicircles.