

The two triangles have the same angles and the same side lengths, indicated by the markings, so they are congruent. You may have thought that two triangles are called similar if they have the same shape and different sizes only. However, similar triangles can have the same size.